The Man Who Helps Boys to Govern Themselves.

"Nothing Without Labor" is the motto of the George Junior Republic, and hard work, earnest study and intelligent self-government are indeed the commonwealth at Freeville, New York, and its sturdy citizens. The republic is not, as many imagine, a reform school, for, though some boys have been committed there, others have been sent by their fathers, who gladly pay to have their sons receive a thorough training in practical citizenship; and Mr. George declares with pride that not one boy who completed the course in the republic has yet "gone wrong." It was through his experience in dealing with the rougher element in a colony of "Fresh Air" children established on his farm in the summer of 1891 that Mr. William R. George discovered that the best way of governing boys as well as adults is simply to help them to govern themselves; for they thus learn in practice their rational obligations to themselves and others. The little republic that he founded in pursuance of this idea now controls three hundred and fifty acres of land with a herd of sixty cattle, eight teams of horses, a pigery and a poultry-plant. Its industries include a bakery, a plumbing establishment, a steam laundry, a cement-tilt plant, a store, a carpenter shop, a smithy and a printing plant, where a weekly paper, "The Citizen," is published. Half of each "citizen's" day is spent in school—nearly all in advanced grammar and high school grades. The other half is spent in whichever available employment the citizen has chosen; but "they that would eat must work." The workers receive on an average from three dollars and fifty cents to four dollars and fifty cents a week in aluminum money, redeemable in United States currency at the public bank. The boys work because of superior industry, can afford it, may board at a cottage called "The Waldorf" because of its superior food and accommodations. The lazy and therefore poorer, boy must be content with the plain quarters and simple food of the "Beaumont"—Woman's Home Companion for May.

The Boss.

Imperious baby foot, so small, When you have stamped, we haste indeed;

Imperious baby voice, your call, Shall send us questioning with all speed;

Your ball has disappeared—the loss Shall be repaired—you are the boss.

Imperious hand, so warm and plump— From candy somewhat sticky, too— You point, and instantly we jump;

Your bidding we must quickly do. Nor linger, lest our king grow cross; You are the boss, you are the boss.

Imperious eyes of deepest blue, Who, then, could dally and be chid When you command? We haste for you—

Each task is done ere you have bid; With hearts you play at pitch and toss—

You are the boss, you are the boss. —Denver Republican.
